

Writeup Run: 2617 – Peng Chau

Date: 12th August, 2019

Location: Peng Chau, A to A

Hares: Brechan & Kids Sullivan and Tinworth

Shamrocks: 2 according to some of the abusive hashers.. probably a 5 – good effort, nice grub and a good break from the shitstorm in town.

Run

So for this week's fun-filled failed state adventure, The pack headed off to Peng Chau for the Brechan and kids classic. Where Brechan's kids turned out to be Sullivan and Tinworth.

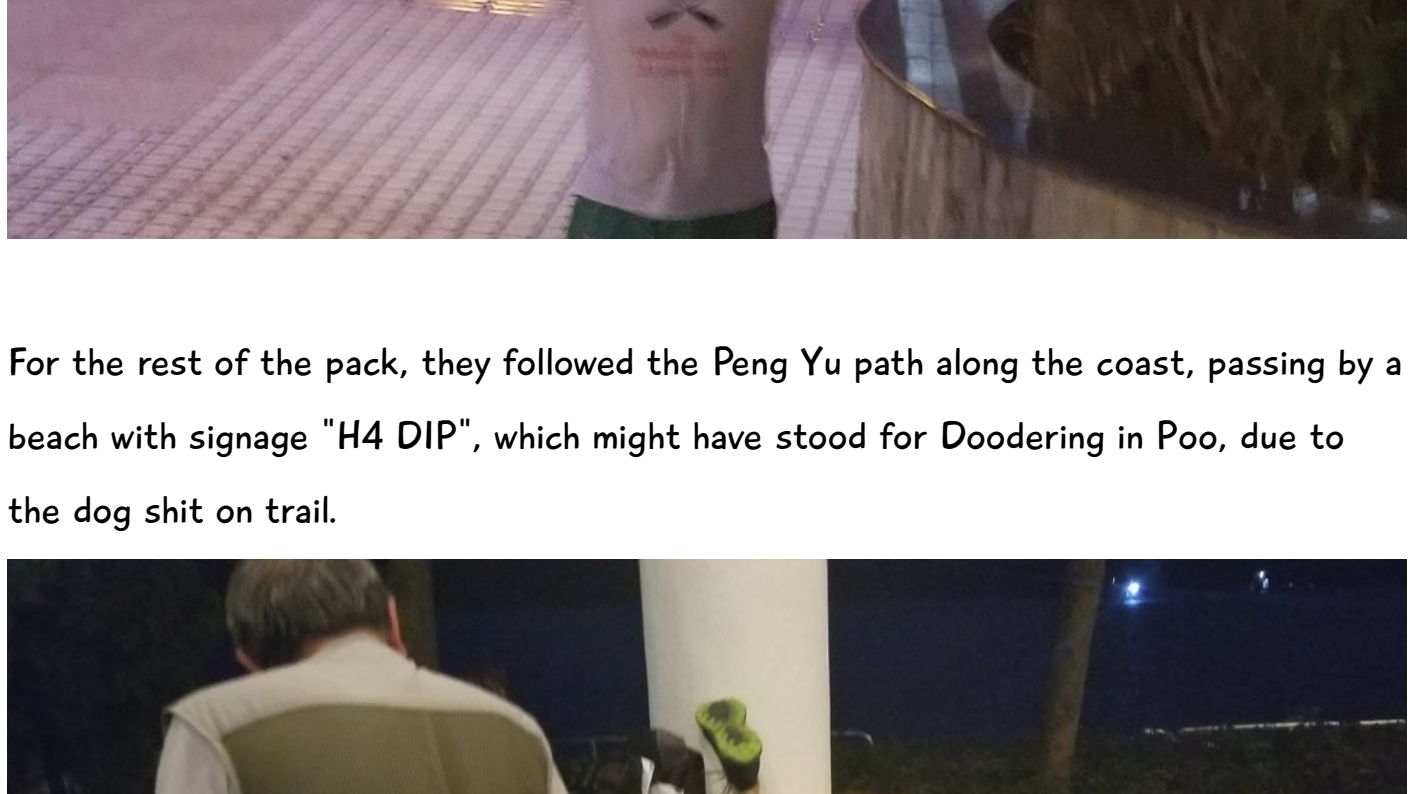

The committee this week relieved of the duty of finding a safe place for the bus pickup, due to the watery location of the run. So after 5, the pack slowly gathered to catch the ferry. With a large trolley of the green stuff ready to be consumed in front of them.

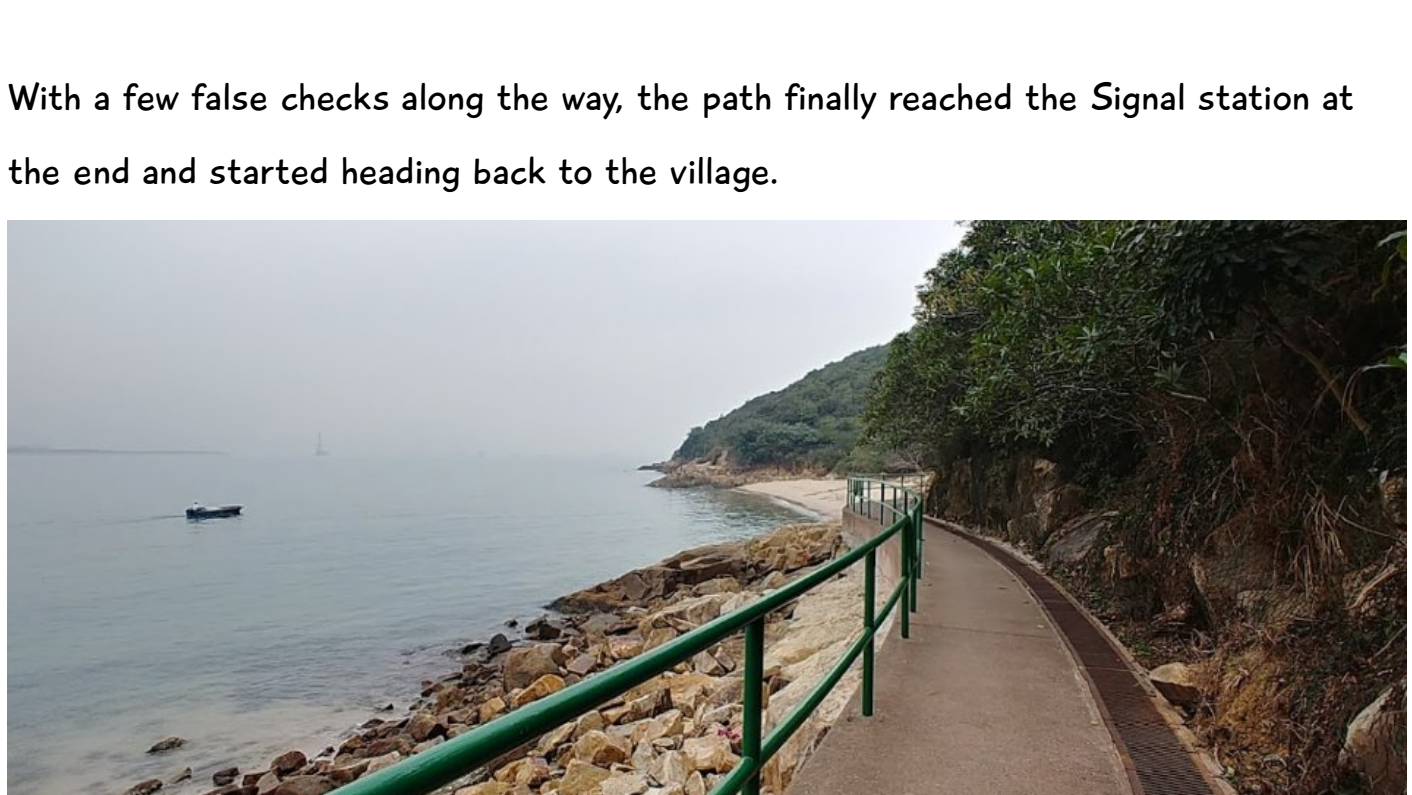

During a subdued trip over the pack discussed run tactics, how to find their way around checks and nothing about the recent turmoil in Hong Kong. Prompting Pooley to espouse how he had been promised a visit to the graveyard and the rest of the pack wonder what he wanted to do there.

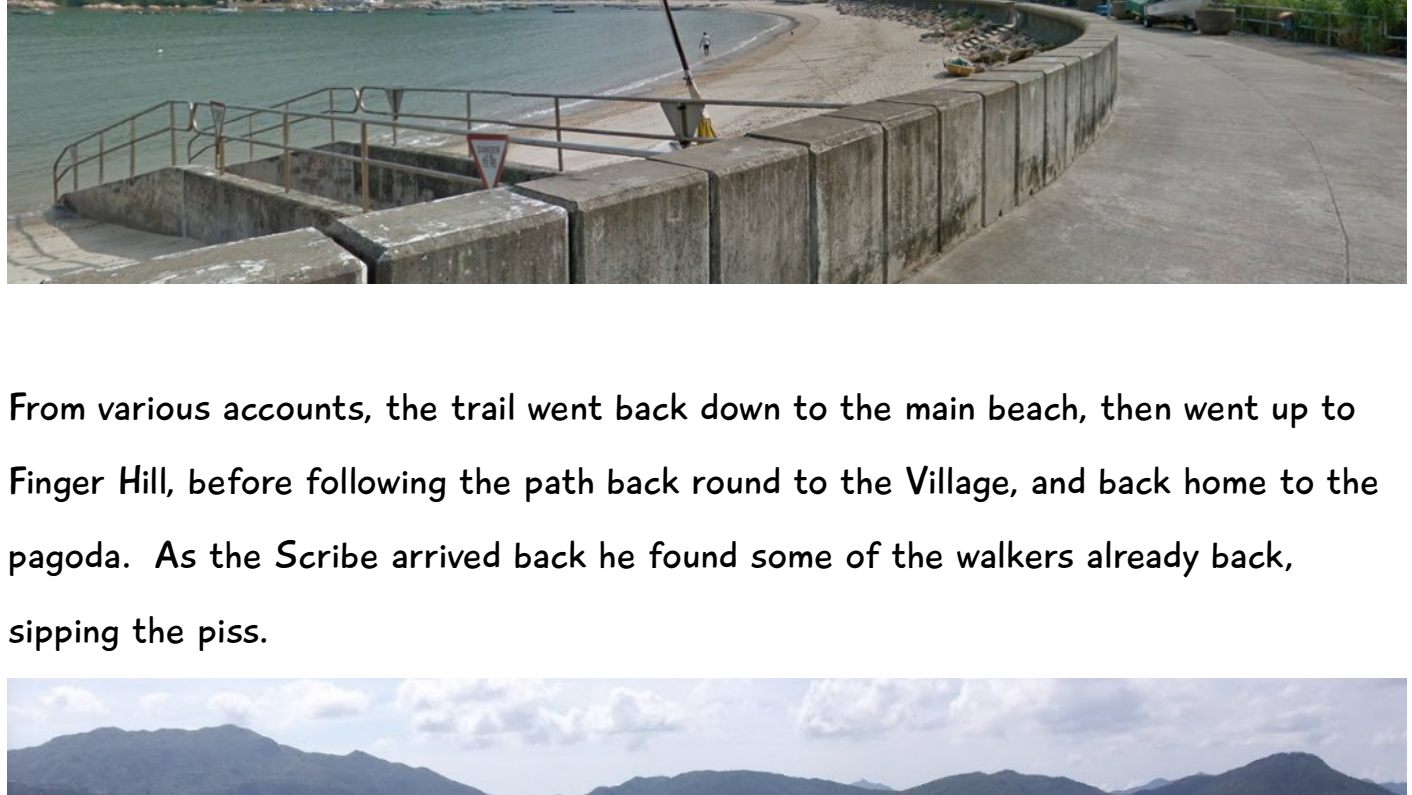

So having arrived at the pagoda next to the Ferry just after 6 pm, your Scribe, in his 'acting-GM' position, giving him just about as much power as Carrie Lam. Followed the details instructions given by the GM, and called On-On shortly after everyone had disembarked from the ferry.

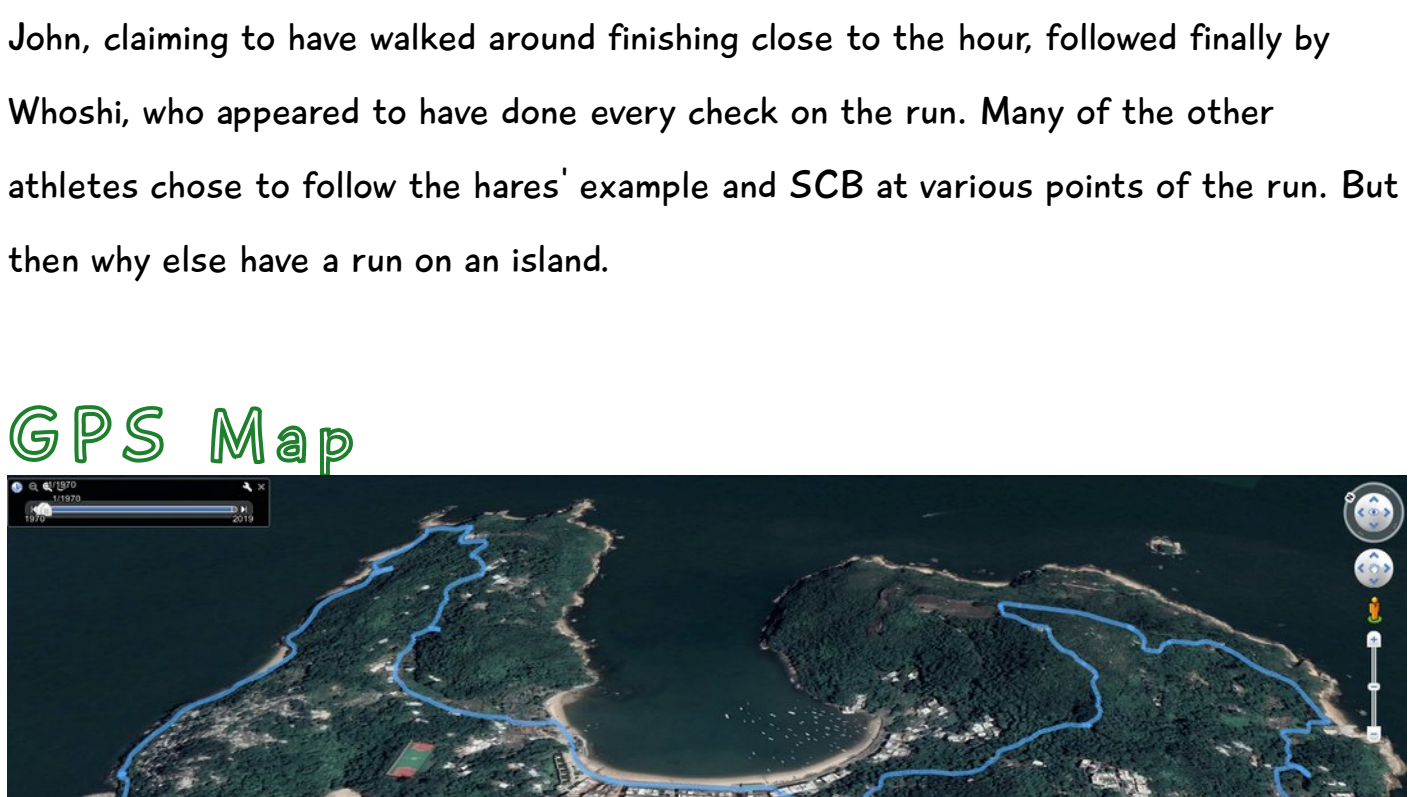

The trail started off heading towards the tiny island of Tai Lei, where, Monte, having grown up in Hong Kong, obviously never visited the island before as he ran down the causeway to the island expecting there to be a trail on it. Other than a swim, it was not that likely.

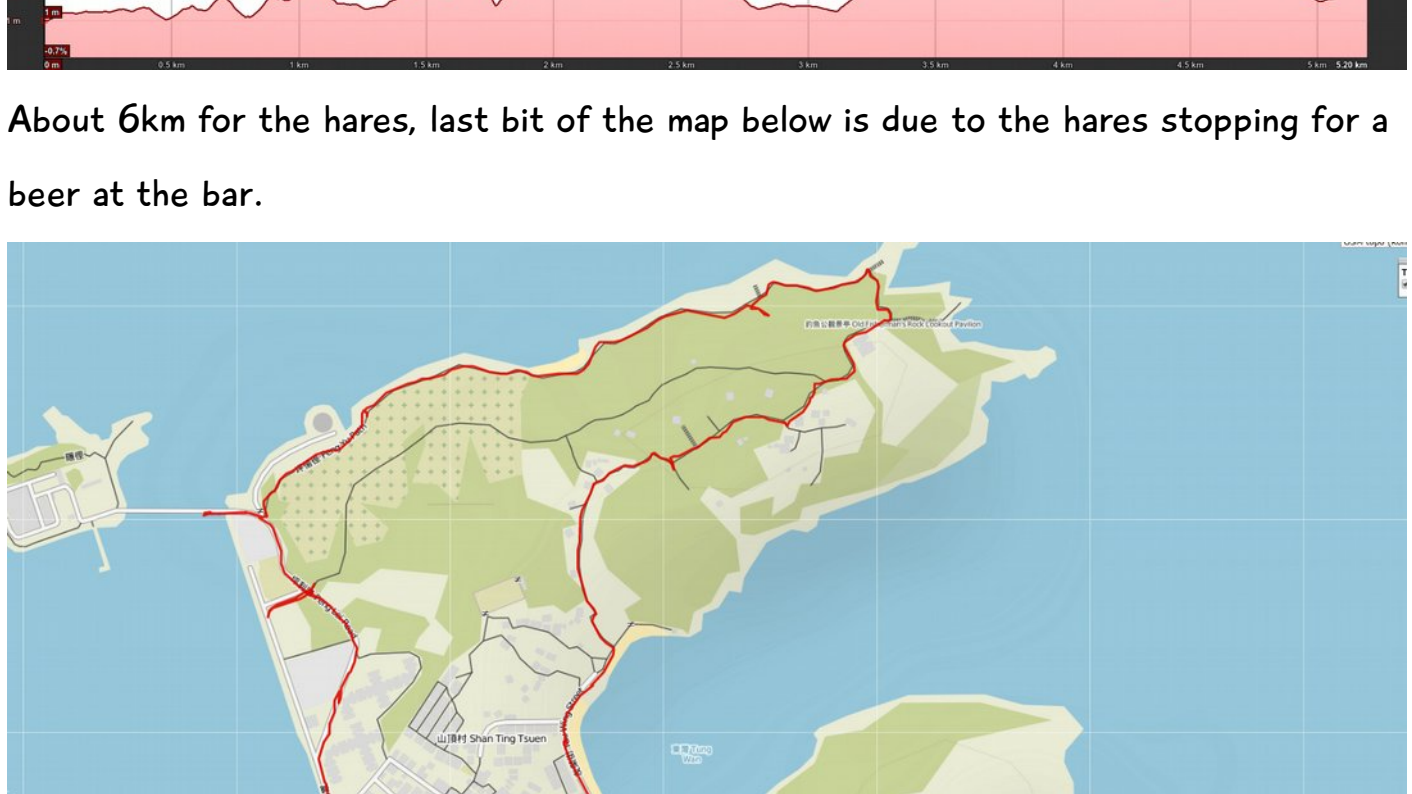

Pooley meanwhile headed up to the graveyard for his nocturnal activities and was sorely disappointed that the checkback was just before the graves.

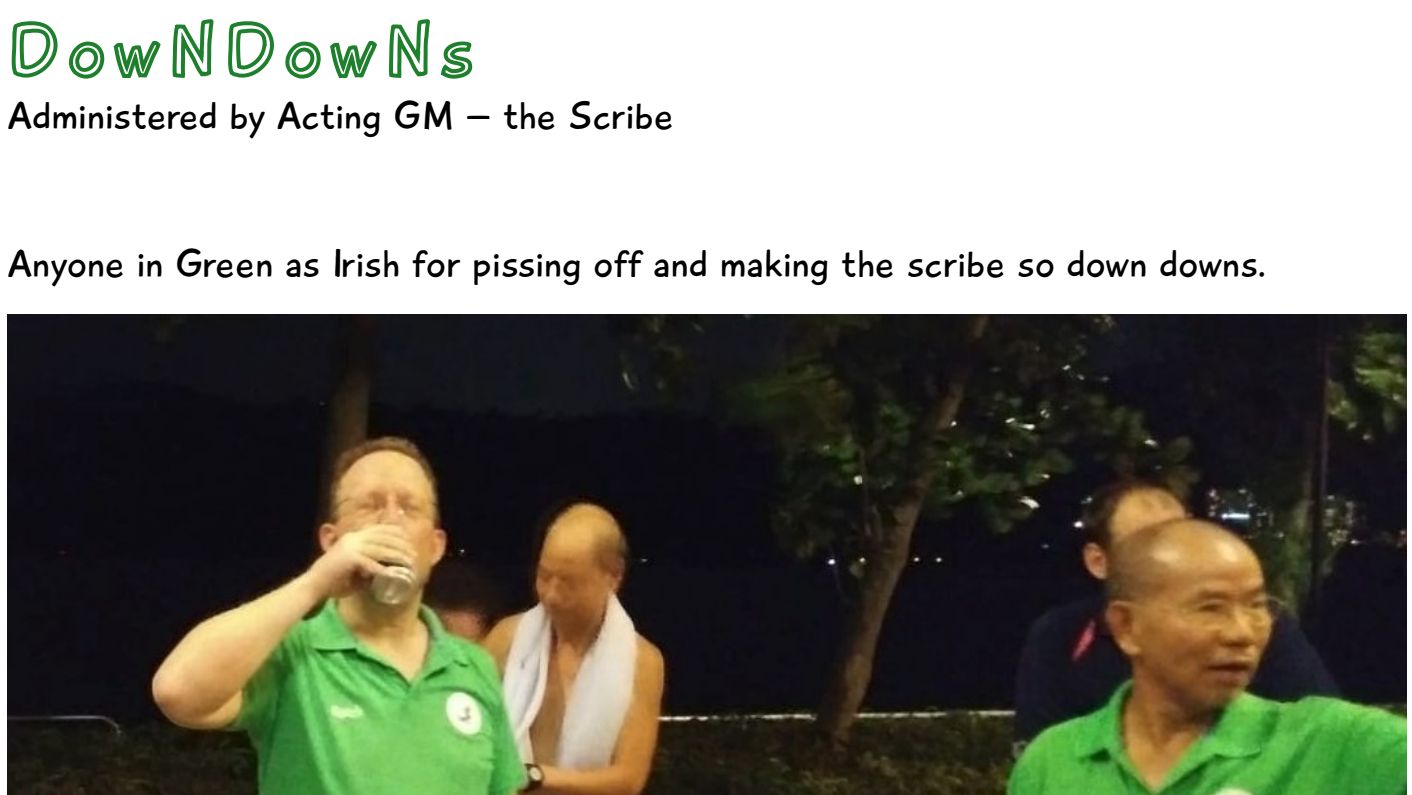

For the rest of the pack, they followed the Peng Yu path along the coast, passing by a beach with signage "H4 DIP", which might have stood for Doodering in Poo, due to the dog shit on trail.

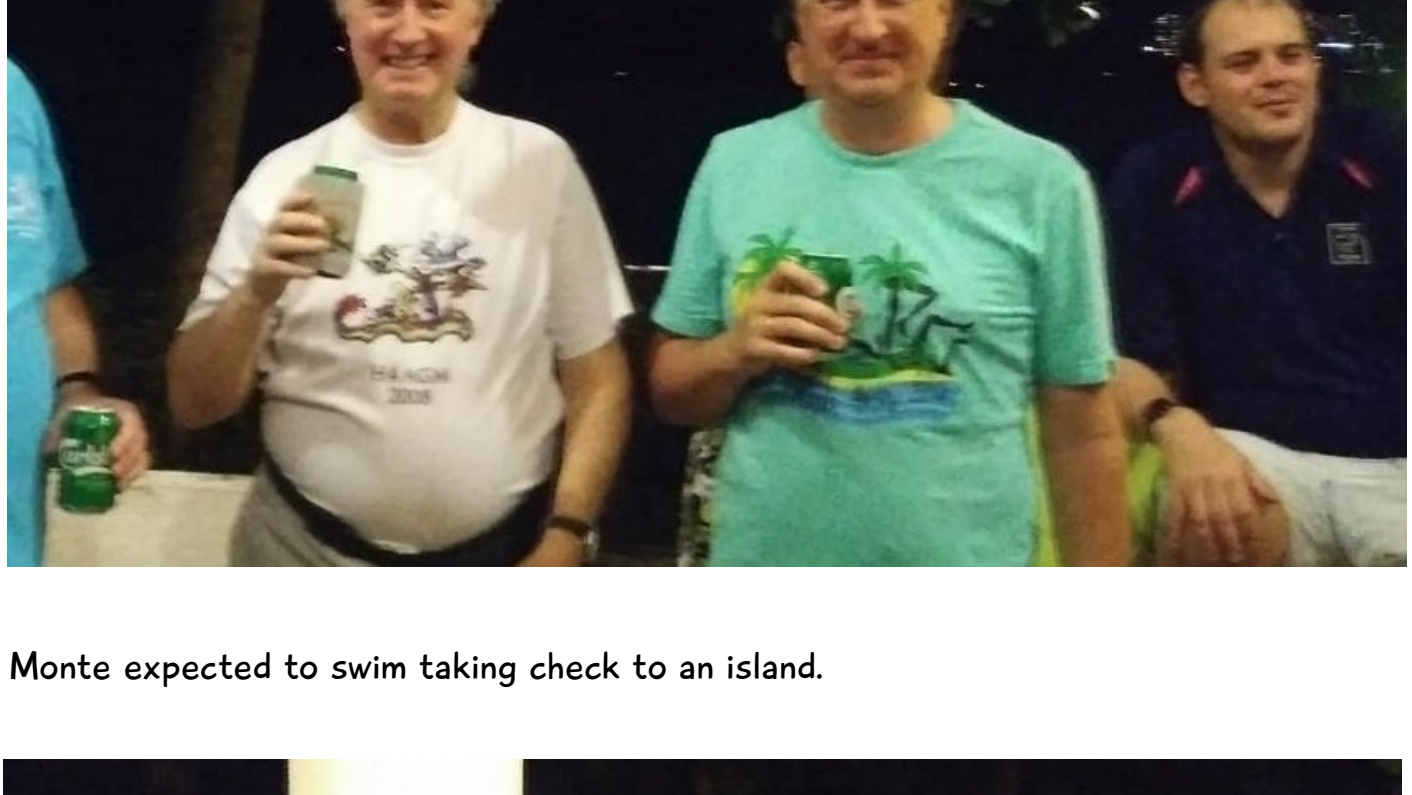

With a few false checks along the way, the path finally reached the Signal station at the end and started heading back to the village.

From here, what happened will remain a mystery, as your Scribe buggered off back to the start to catch the front runners at this point, so has no idea where the trail went.

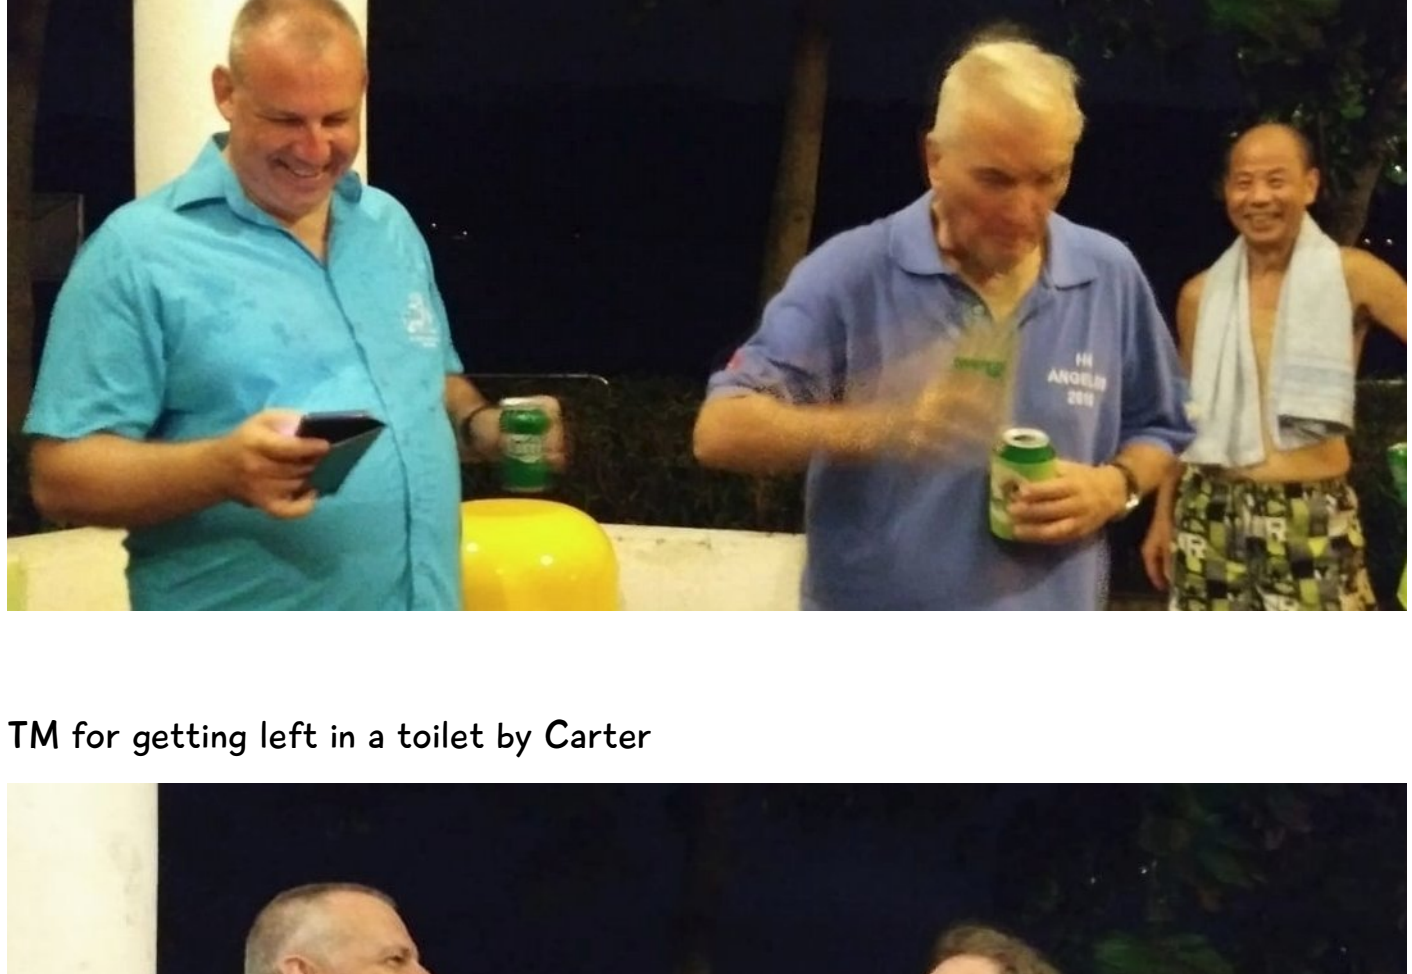

From various accounts, the trail went back down to the main beach, then went up to Finger Hill, before following the path back round to the Village, and back home to the pagoda. As the Scribe arrived back he found some of the walkers already back, sipping the piss.

From there a steady stream of runners potted in every few minutes or so. Visitor John, claiming to have walked around finishing close to the hour, followed finally by Whoshi, who appeared to have done every check on the run. Many of the other athletes chose to follow the hares' example and SCB at various points of the run. But then why else have a run on an island.

GPS Map

About 6km for the hares, last bit of the map below is due to the hares stopping for a beer at the bar.
